

Using the CLASS to Improve Staff Performance: (But We're Not Keeping Score)

April 6-7, 2010, Doubletree Guest Suites Historic Charleston, Charleston, South Carolina

There are currently many popular tools for rating classroom quality. NAEYC accreditation criteria, along with the ITERS and the ECERS are perhaps the most commonly used. With the re-authorization of Head Start in 2007, yet a new rating scale has appeared on the scene – the Classroom Assessment Scoring System, or CLASS. Why does the Federal government want to introduce yet another rating scale when we already have plenty? There are two very good reasons.

- ★ The CLASS is an instrument that rates only the quality of staff-child interactions
- ★ Research has demonstrated that the quality of these interactions, particularly in the Domains of Emotional Support and Instructional Support are reliable predictors of success in school. The same cannot be said for items measured by other instruments.

Because the CLASS has been piloted for use in Federal monitoring reviews, there is very high interest in the OHS-sponsored training on scoring classrooms using the CLASS instrument. (This is not the OHS-sponsored training.) In Using the CLASS to Improve Staff Performance, we are not nearly as interested in keeping score as we are in using the CLASS to make lasting and ongoing improvement in the quality of teacher-child interactions in Head Start classrooms. In order to accomplish this, supervisors, content specialists, and managers need two sets of skills that Using the CLASS to Improve Staff Performance provides:

- ★ A working knowledge of CLASS domains, dimensions, indicators, and behavioral markers; and
- ★ The tools to help all staff members, even the most marginal and/or entrenched staff, improve their interactions with children.

This training provides hand-on, nuts-and-bolts strategies for helping staff change the way they think about how they teach and to encourage them to be willing to change not just because we say so (or even because the CLASS says so), but because they believe it is what's best for children. Come to this training to find out how to support your staff through the change that the CLASS represents. Your scores will probably improve as well!

The Standard Registration Fee is $295 per person. Members of T/TAS@Your Service may qualify for the Subscriber Rate of $280 per person. (Some restrictions may apply based on level of subscription; visit www.ttas.org/ays.html for information on how to become a subscriber.)
